

When we are out of reality we become Satan

Prabhakar C

Bipolarity of man is well reflected in this statement, where one side of it is divinity and the other side of it is solid individualism. The true quest of a man is to touch divinity, for that he/she adopts religion as the stepping stone to start with in the journey towards satisfying that quench. Soon he finds the religion is spanning a wide spectrum wherein one end the idea of greatest is understood while at the other end grossness with adverse beliefs (aka. Superstitions) is evident where the majority are gravitated towards. And hence realises soon that it is tough to tread the path with the means adopted.

When the individual mind is nurtured that is when we begin to display ourselves in terms of prejudice, anger, desires, passion etc which in turn cause more and more impressions of that sort to form/strengthen. As a result we will be moving far away from the objective, thereby nurturing the Satanic behaviours(devilisation) of the self. That means to say we go on imbibing that which is not in consonance with reality, as our Master said we become satan when we are out of reality.

Hence our Master puts the real transformation that is required is from devilisation of the self to divinisation. For that transformation our Master has presented us various meditational practices under the system of Pranahuti Aided Meditation. Also our Master's commandments really provide us the mechanism to assess our journey towards this transformation. Another aspect that will help us to get firm and steady on the path is to understand & interpret the experiences felt during meditation correctly and try to remain in that feeling as long as we can, in other words owning up the condition. When this happens the satanic behaviours gets weakened there by strengthening the pious behaviours, which means to say we have slowly started moving towards our objective of divinisation of self.
